How important is a VIN?

Are you interested in buying a used vehicle? In the process of your research, not only should you know what the value of the vehicle is, you should also check the VIN for possible problems. The VIN (vehicle identification number) that consists of a combination of numbers and letters, will provide you with a multitude of information. Such as, whether the car was in a natural disaster (like a flood), damaged in an accident, or if it was reported stolen. The National Insurance Crime Bureau offers a free VIN check service at www.nicb.org, or you can call them at 1-800-835-6422.

There are dishonest people out in this world that are just waiting to sell you a refurbished or stolen vehicle. Check out the VIN before you purchase and protect yourself and your money. Like the saying goes, “It’s always better to be safe, than sorry”.
